Drivers will be able to access voice-enabled AI on the road through the Onn. Wireless FM Transmitter, which offers seamless voice access to services

Native Voice has collaborated with Walmart to integrate its library of voice AIs into vehicles, it said in a press release dated Nov. 7. The partnership will allow drivers to access voice-enabled AI on the road through the Onn. Wireless FM Transmitter, which offers seamless voice access to services such as “Hey iHeart,” “Hey TuneIn,” and “Hey AccuWeather;” along with voice assistants such as Siri and Google Assistant. The integration of Native Voice's conversational AI library with the Onn. FM Transmitter provides an upgrade to the listening experience for drivers who do not have a Bluetooth connection in their vehicles.

“We know that using voice is the fastest and easiest way to access the content you love on the go so we’re excited to bring the Native Voice library of voice AIs to the car in partnership with Walmart. With plug and play setup, and backed by the enormous content catalogues of iHeart and TuneIn, this is the easiest way to make your car smarter and distraction free,” said John Goscha, founder and CEO at Native Voice.
